TUSCANY

Tuscany wine region stretches picturesquely along the Ligurian coast in Italy and is one of the most prestigious wine-growing regions in the world. More than half of Tuscany's hillside vineyards are planted with Sangiovese grapes. Historically the region is known for its production of Chianti. In fact, the Chianti zone is the oldest appellation in the region. The region's other most significant red wines are the famed Super Tuscan. A local take on the classic Bordeaux-style blend of Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, and Syrah (and sometimes Cabernet Franc), these wines were developed, in part, as a reaction to the restrictive regulations in Tuscany during the 1970s.

VARIETIES

Nearly two-thirds of Tuscany's vineyards are planted with Sangiovese. It's the region's most important grape. Trebbiano is the most widely planted white variety, but as far as white wines go, Vernaccia and Vermentino have more to offer.

IT'S NOT JUST ALL ABOUT SANGIOVESE...
